The most important facts at a glance:

Consent

- Must be given voluntarily and actively (no pre-selected checkboxes)
- Information on the use of the data must be given prior to consent ("general agreements" are prohibited, purpose must be stated in detail)
- You must be able to prove the agreement at any time, because
- The customer has the right to view and revoke the consent at any time
- Revocation must be as easy as consent
- Minors under the age of 16 can only give their consent with the consent of a guardian
- Consents may expire if they are not used for the respective purpose in a long time

Advantage: Consent can be proven at any time in case of dispute

Legitimate Interest

- Applicable especially in already existing customer relationships
- Customers have to know already that their data is being processed to a certain extent (meaning you have pointed this out, for example in the data protection declaration)
- You have weighed your legitimate interest (economic interest is legitimate) against the interests of the recipient
- Your messages constitute only a minimal invasion of privacy for the receiver
- You need to send the message in order to pursue your legitimate interest

Caution: If the recipients are minors under the age of 16, their privacy will always win over your interest in cases of doubt.

Double Opt-In

- Not required by law, not completely legally secure
- Recommended because in case of dispute authorities have often decided in favour of those parties that made use of the double opt-in
- Reduces the risk of misuse of numbers
- Should be obtained via the channel that is also used to send messages (i.e. via mobile phone in the case of SMS)

The request for confirmation should include

- The name of your company
- Information on how often and for what purpose you will send SMS
- The possibility to revoke the consent/unsubscribe
- Depending on the destination country, information on costs when replying to the SMS

Two ways to obtain consent on the mobile phone:

- Enable reply via SMS (you will need an inbound number)
  - Pro: Can be confirmed from any mobile phone
  - Con: Customers bear the costs for confirmation SMS
- Reply via Link
  - Pro: Free of charge
  - Con: Requires an internet connection and is therefore not accessible from all mobile phones

Agreement on commissioned data processing

- Necessary in most cases where third parties are involved in the processing of data (or if they have access to this data)
- Content depends on many factors, examination by data protection officer or legal counsel recommended
